

28. Technology and television

Given the importance of television and technology in shaping contemporary society, Leslie J Francis has consistently focused some studies in this area. The Francis Scale of Attitude toward Computers has become a recognised instrument in the field.

Chapters

Francis, L. J. (1995). The measurement of attitudes toward computers among undergraduate students in Wales: the comparison of four scales in relationship to sex, age, personality and religion. In Y. J. Katz (Ed.), Computers in education: Pedagogical and psychological implications (pp. 85-112). Sofia: Bulgarian Academy of Science. ISBN 954-885-4023.

Articles

Gibson, H. M., & Francis, L. J. (1992). Who watches the news? Adolescents and television. Psychological Reports, 71, 50.

Gibson, H. M., & Francis, L. J. (1992). A profile of television viewing and programme preferences among secondary school pupils in Scotland. Collected Original Resources in Education, 16 (1), fiche 2, FO9.

Francis, L. J. (1993). Measuring attitude toward computers among undergraduate college students: The affective domain. Computers and Education, 20, 251-255.

Francis, L. J., & Gibson, H. M. (1993). Television, pop culture and the drift from Christianity during adolescence, British Journal of Religious Education, 15, 31-37.

Francis, L. J., & Gibson, H. M. (1993). The influence of age, sex, social class and religion on television viewing time and programme preferences among 11-15 year olds. Journal of Educational Television, 19, 25-35.

Gibson, H. M., & Francis, L. J. (1993). The relationship between television viewing preferences and interest in science among 11-15 year olds. Research in Science and Technological Education, 11, 185-190.

Francis, L. J. (1994). The relationship between computer related attitudes and gender stereotyping of computer use. Computers and Education, 22, 283-289.

Francis, L. J., & Evans, T. E. (1995). The reliability and validity of the Bath County Computer Attitude Scale. Journal of Educational Computing Research, 12, 135-146.

Evans, T. E., Katz, Y. J., & Francis, L. J. (1995). Psychometric properties of the Hebrew version of the Francis Attitude Toward Computers Scale. Psychological Reports, 77, 1003-1010.

Katz, Y. J., Evans, T. E., & Francis, L. J. (1995). The reliability and validity of the Hebrew version of the Bath County Computer Attitude scale. Journal of Educational Computing Research 13, 237-244.

Katz, Y. J., & Francis, L. J. (1995). Personality, religiosity and computer oriented attitudes among trainee teachers in Israel. Computers in Human Behaviour, 11, 1-8.

Francis, L. J. & Katz, Y. J. (1996). The gender stereotyping of computer use among female undergraduate students in Israel and the relationship with computer-related attitudes. Journal of Educational Media, 22, 79-86.

Francis, L. J., Katz, Y. J., & Evans, T. (1996). The relationship between personality and attitudes towards computers among female undergraduate students in Israel. British Journal of Educational Technology, 27, 164-170.

Francis, L. J. (1997). The socio-psychological profile of the teenage television addict. Muslim Education Quarterly, 15, 4-19.

Francis, L. J., & Jones, S. H. (1999). The Computer Attitude Scale: Review and commendation. Collected Original Resources in Education, 23(3), fiche 1, AO6.